Urban encounters: How to ‘read’ a city
Each fall, an urban studies research seminar, offered to juniors and seniors, dives into research methods in the field. This fall, 15 Princeton students delved into historical accounts, literary works, art and film that capture the communities and landmarks of two cities — New York and Moscow....
www.princeton.edu

Highlight Seminar Series:
John Crittenden, Georgia Institute of Technology - Andlinger Center for Energy and the Environment Professor John Crittenden, of the Georgia Institute of Technology, will speak on “Gigatechnology: Developing Sustainable Urban Infrastructure to Solve Gigaton Problems” as part of the 2019/2020 Highlight Seminar Series. ...
acee.princeton.edu
Princeton's annual technology celebration spotlights innovation and societal impact

Speaking at Princeton's annual technology showcase on Nov. 14, Princeton's inaugural Vice Dean for Innovation Rodney Priestley delivered Princeton's vision for engaging in entrepreneurship in ways that have societal impact. "Princeton's informal motto is 'In the nation's service and the service of humanity,'" said Priestley, ...

www.princeton.edu

---

National and International News

Cities, cars, and climate change: 8 issues that will define the 2020s - Curbed

8 issues that will define cities in the 2020s. Cars, climate change, and cameras are just some of the tough issues city leaders need to grapple with in the coming decade

www.curbed.com
Toyota is building a 'smart' city to test AI, robots and self-driving cars Carmaker Toyota has unveiled plans for a 2,000-person "city of the future" near Japan's Mount Fuji, where it will test emerging technologies in a real-life environment.
www.cnn.com

How aerial transportation will shape cities of the future
Governments and businesses need to collaborate to make the most of drones and flying vehicles www.weforum.org

Killer heat: US cities' plans for coming heatwaves fail to protect vulnerable | Cities | The Guardian Exclusive: With heatwaves predicted to worsen dramatically over the next 30 years, many big US cities are failing to fully plan to protect those most vulnerable to extreme heat www.theguardian.com
The ‘parasitic’ homes that could change cities - BBC Worklife
The SHED Project is an example of so-called ‘parasitic architecture’, in which new structures are added onto, between or even inside pre-existing ones. At a time when many cities are facing ... www.bbc.com

The Water Crisis In Cities Everywhere Is Worsening Already Terrible Inequality | HuffPost
In a report published this year, the World Resources Institute (WRI) found that 17 countries — home to a quarter of the global population — face “extremely high” levels of water stress. These countries — which include India, Eritrea, Botswana and many Middle Eastern nations — ....... www.huffpost.com

How do you stop a megacity grinding to a halt? A cartoon Until four years ago Dar Es Salaam had no public transport. Artist Popa Matumula looks at the impact a new bus system is having on the city’s legendarily bad traffic www.theguardian.com
Urban America likely to gain clout after Census | TheHill

A decades-long trend of Americans moving to densely-packed urban cores is likely to sap rural parts of the country of their political power in coming years as a new reapportionment and...

thehill.com

If you received this letter as a forwarded email and you would like to subscribe to the Metropolis Project email list, used to distribute this newsletter and more, request to be added by emailing metronews@princeton.edu.